"HAVE A HEART"

Cameo Comedy
with Cliff Bowes,
Virginia Vance and Ruth Hiatt.

Cliff is visiting a friend in a hospital where you go in on crutches--- and come out on a stretcher. He is all sympathy for his friend until the head nurse walks through the room, and then Cliff decides that the hospital is a pretty good place to be in. She is one reason why so many rich men enjoyed poor health---in that hospital.

Cliff decides to become a patient and promptly throws a fit. The head doctor and his assistant examine him and discover he is shamming and throw him out.

Cliff then thinks up a plan that will land him in a hospital as a patient. He runs his automobile off of a cliff and then lies down beside it waiting to be discovered. A policeman finds him and calls an ambulance, which takes him to a hospital--but it is the wrong hospital. Cliff jumps from the stretcher and goes back to his wrecked car and is again picked up and rushed to a hospital--the right one this time.

He is recognized again and in trying to escape from the head doctor, hides in the bed of another patient, who is about to be operated on. Just before they cut into him, Cliff sees what is going on and makes his escape from the hospital with the head nurse. All is well until an automobile comes along and knocks Cliff head over heels--and he lands in the hospital again, this time as a real patient.

"There is plenty of amusing incidents in this one reeler"
MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"There are enough laughs in this one to put it over with most audiences"
EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

"The comedy keeps moving at a good pace and should prove satisfactory to the average 'slapstick' fan."
